2. Activities

February marked the beginning of the spring semester, bringing with it a number of meetings and institutional activities. During the month, the first meeting of the Faculty of Humanities Doctoral Council of the semester was held, alongside departmental meetings. The EDÖK Executive Board also convened several times.

On 16 February, a preparatory meeting for the opening of the new cycle was held with the faculty leadership at an external venue. The dean and the vice-deans met to discuss current issues of the faculty and the plans for the upcoming period. On this occasion, the participants also welcomed the newly elected Vice-Dean for Research, Dr Gábor Vaderna. The meeting took place in a constructive and friendly atmosphere.

At the meeting of the Faculty's Scientific Committee, Ildikó Horn said farewell to the committee as she will take up the position of Vice-Rector for Research. The committee expressed its gratitude for her work and wished her success in her new role.

During the month, doctoral students also organised a doctoral student meeting, providing an opportunity for PhD students to gather informally, exchange experiences and discuss any issues that might have arisen.

Preparations for the third Trefort Conference are already underway. In parallel, the organisation of the Faculty Humanities Days has also begun, as the two events will take place at the same time in May. As part of the preparations, arrangements have been made for the student union to have a table at the event. Together with other representatives, we have also started brainstorming possible activities and interactive elements that could engage visitors and help promote the doctoral programmes.
